

Andrej Hrausky

Andrej Hrausky studied at the faculty of architecture in Ljubljana. Since completing his studies in 1976 he has worked as an architecture critic, exhibition curator, publicist and as a lecturer focusing on "Slovenian architecture". Andrej Hrausky has been a member of the AB magazine publishing team since 1975, director of the DESSA architecture gallery in Ljubljana since 1982, and manager of the same since 1989. He has headed the Arhé architectural firm since 1990. He organised more than 150 exhibitions in Ljubljana and abroad and held lectures and talks around the world about Slovenian architecture. Hrausky published in renowned, international architecture magazines including Arch (Bratislava), architektur.aktuell (Vienna) or Domus (Milan), and wrote several books, e. g. on the Slovenian architect Jože Plečnik or "An architecture guide to Ljubljana", published in 2002. Andrej Hrausky also acts as a judge for international architecture awards and competitions; most recently, he was Slovenian commissioner at the 2004 Venice architecture biennial.
